DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

1. The Examiner acknowledges the amended claims filed on September 8, 2008.

Claims 1-3, 8, 13, and 15-17 have been amended. Claim 1 has been cancelled.

Allowable Subject Matter

2. Claims 1-13 and 15-17 (Renumbered as 1-16) are allowed.
3. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

Regarding claim 1, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that that upon the generating means generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying means interrupts the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the image processing apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 2, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generating means generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the first supplying means interrupts the supplying of the image data to the image managing apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the image managing apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the image managing apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 3, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generating means generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying means interrupts the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the another apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 8, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generation of new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus is interrupted, the new representative image data is supplied to the another apparatus, and then the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus is resumed after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 13, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generation of new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus is interrupted, the new representative image data is supplied to the another apparatus, and then the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus is resumed after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 13, the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generator generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying unit interrupts the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the image processing apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 15 (Renumbered as 14), the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generator generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the first supplying unit interrupts the supplying of the image data to the image managing apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the image managing apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the image managing apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 16 (Renumbered as 15), the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the first obtaining unit obtaining new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the second supplying unit interrupts the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the image processing apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the image processing apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Regarding claim 17 (Renumbered as 16), the main reason for indication of allowable subject matter is because the prior art fails to teach or reasonably suggest, including all the elements of the present claim, that upon the generator generating new representative image data representing new image data generated from a newly picked up image, the supplying unit interrupts the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus, supplies the new representative image data to the another apparatus, and then resumes the supplying of the image data to the another apparatus after completing the supplying of the new representative image data.

Conclusion

4. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.
5. Koide, JP 2000-134531 A teaches the concept of having a camera that when transmitting images to an external apparatus, if a new image is to be generated, the camera interrupts the transmission of the image while capturing the new image data and performing storage of said new image data in its internal memory (See English Translation, page 7, ¶ 0009 – page 11, ¶ 0021; also pages 13-19). This reference does not teach the concept of transmitting the new generated image prior to resuming the transmission of the previous image.
6. Nitta, US 2002/0054222 A1 teaches the concept of having a camera that when transmitting images to an external apparatus, if a new image is to be generated, the camera interrupts the transmission of the image while capturing the new image data and performing storage of said new image data in its internal memory (Fig. 2; page 5, ¶ 0068-0073). This reference does not teach the concept of transmitting the new generated image prior to resuming the transmission of the previous image.
